PROVO POINTS.

Provo Canyon—Quarantine Against Diphtheria—D. & R. G.—Etc.

PROVO CITY, Aug. 23, 1881.

Editors Herald:

Two months ago our physician prescribed two weeks' vacation, during which to avoid the haunts of business and coquet with Dame Nature in the shady groves along the banks of the Timpanogas. Being a firm believer in the homeopathic principle, we compromised by agreeing to take the prescription by installments at the rate of one or more days a week. Provo Canyon is fast becoming a favorite resort for pleasure seekers and invalids. In the course of weekly visits there we have often met with excursion parties from other settlements in search of recreation. Angling for trout has been one of the favorite amusements, and some of these excursionists proved to be experts at the business. One Daggett succeeded in catching enough one afternoon to load a mule, and did not use giant powder either.

Like many other towns, Provo has passed through a sickly ordeal. The number of cases of diphtheria were increasing to such an alarming extent, that about six weeks ago it was found necessary to adopt pretty strict quarantine measures. Since then a yellow flag has been displayed at each house where a case existed, and there has been a steady decrease in the number suffering that terrible disease.

The Denver and Rio Grande Western Railway continues to progress, and furnishes employment for a large number of our people. Some have railroad contracts in other directions, and those not interested in railroads have all they can attend to at home.

The farmers are very busy gathering in their grain, with every indication of an abundant yield. The hum of threshing machines now mingle with the other sounds of industry, and taking everything into consideration this is the busiest time of the year.

The usual amount of buildings are being erected, notwithstanding the busy time. Most of the buildings are being put up under contracts by the Provo Lumber and Building Company, Wm. Faxman, superintendent. This company is prepared to take contracts to build anything from a hen coop to an insane asylum, and to furnish all the material.

We cannot help but notice the good feelings manifested on account of the location of the insane asylum at this place. The people here seem to exhibit more goodwill towards Salt Lake City, and they also appreciate the liberality of the HERALD manifested in publishing our views on the subject. We still think this is the best place in the territory for lunatics.
